NINETY-FIVE YEARS LATER!

Ninety-five years ago, on Palm Sunday, April 9, 1865, there occurred here at Appomattox one of the truly important episodes in American and world history. On that day, a "Gentlemen's Peace" was made, ending the tremendous War Between the States, and Appomattox thereupon became a fabulous nameplace.

Ninety-five years have come and gone, and Appomattox itself, all America and the world, have been negligent in memorializing this famous Peace Shrine.

Today, most of your Federal tax money, paid and borrowed, goes to some phase of Killing WARS, past and present and future. The ideal of a Christian PEACE has been lost in the LUST FOR BLOOD. Verily, a staggering burden of debt is being given as a heritage to future generations, because a careless world has ignored the Christian PEACE at Appomattox.

Appomattox! There is a latent magic in the name. We, living here and writing here, are not so bold as to say that it is America's greatest Shrine. There is, for example, that matchless estate where the Potomac makes its great curve to lave the banks at Mount Vernon where the "Father" of our great nation rests in peace. And there is the Shrine on Little Mountain lifting its head above the plains of Albemarle where Mr. Jefferson lived and wrought. Who is to say, which is our greatest Shrine?

But, it is a constant burden upon our soul and conscience, that we here at historic Appomattox have a rendezvous with Destiny!

Shall we be like the Followers who SLEPT while the blessed MASTER went through his agony before giving his precious Life for our Salvation? Would it not be better for us to dedicate our very life to service to see that Appomattox rode the Glory Trail to its rightful place as a GLEAM, a DREAM, a Sacred Place, where all the best in man is forever enshrined?

Robert E. Lee!
Ulysis Grant!
Appomattox!
PEACE!

Is there anything in all America comparable to the challenge of these fabulous words?

About Compulsory Retirement

Many men and women, facing difficulty in finding employment because of their age, insist that business and industry are making a serious mistake in stressing age in connection with employment. These "unwanted" workers denounce the "prejudice against age" and assert that most older employees, through the benefit of past experience, can be both productive and profitable to their employers. They intimate that age, experience and dependability are assets while loftier more than offset the pep, enthusiasm, exuberance and inexperience of younger workers.

Some years ago, when a society began to worry about the fate of worn-out workers, the theory was advanced, and somewhat widely accepted, that old-age pensions would be the solution to this problem.

Now, with old-age security and a steadily extending program of industrial pensions, the sociologists are not quite sure that the desires of all people can be taken care of by an old-age pension.

There are many reports of workers, in all sections of the nation, who, upon reaching the sixty-five-year-old retirement age, complain bitterly about the assumption that they are unfit to continue working. It seems that there are people who do not want to be forced to retire.

KITES AND WIRES

This is the season of the year when youngsters of various ages delight in the flying of kites.

Some of the youngsters with gray hair and many years have to enjoy their kite-flying by proxy, but boys and girls will go them one better putting up their kites in the breezes.

It is well to warn the youngsters to stay away from electric power lines and highways. Don't use wire for a kite-string or a cord with tinsel or wire in it. Be sure the cord isn't wet. If kites break loose and the cord falls across electric wires, leave it alone.

Of course, we know that very few boys and girls who actually fly kites each spring will read this editorial. However, the retired kite-flyers, remembering the days of their youth, might be reminded to caution their youngsters. A few words of warning, sometimes, might save a young life.

Homemakers Items

Rural homemakers will soon be facing a familiar problem - what to do with excess milk produced when dairy cows are turned out on lush spring pastures.

Guy J. Nageotte, dairy products specialist at VPI, says that many rural families which keep one or two dairy cows for the family milk supply, will have more fluid milk than they can use. With careful planning, the homemaker can convert excess milk into dairy products that are easily stored.

Fluid milk is bulky and quite perishable. So it is necessary to convert it into products which are actually concentrated milk foods and have superior keeping qualities, butter, cream, ice cream, cream cheese, and aged cheese are easily made and stored in the home, says Nageotte.

These foods contain part or all of the easily digested fats, proteins, carbohydrates, minerals, and vitamins found in whole milk. Stored dairy products are convenient and available when unexpected guest or other emergency needs arise.

Quality of milk used for these products is important. Only fresh, clean, good-flavored milk should be used. Inferior products from inferior milk will spoil quickly.

Dairy foods from pasteurized milk or cream have better keeping qualities. Milk and cream can be pasteurized easily in the home. This process will destroy 90 to 95 percent of the bacteria that cause spoilage in raw milk. It also inactivates the natural enzymes, which are always present in raw milk, and often cause development of off-flavors in stored products.

Pasteurization also maintains freshness. Two or three days supply of sweet milk or cream can be accumulated before processing, after pasteurization.

Salt brine can be used to store butter. Freezers may be used for storing butter, cream, ice cream, and cream cheese. Refrigerated and cool cellars can be used for storing aged cheeses.

For further information on how to make and store dairy products in the home, contact your county home demonstration agent or write to the department of dairy science, V.P.I., Blacksburg.

RICHARDSON NAMED STAR FARMER FOR '60

Pictures shown Myron Richardson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Bernard Richardson of Rt. 2, Appomattox, receiving the Chapter Star Farmer award from Mr. Henry Pack, the Chapter Advisor presents the award at the annual Father-Son Banquet sponsored by the Robert E. Lee Future Farmers of America Chapter.

By Leroy Williamson
Chapter Reporter

Myron Richardson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Bernard Richardson, of Appomattox, has been named Chapter Star Farmer for this year at the annual Father-Son Banquet, the Robert E. Lee Chapter presents its outstanding member with the Chapter Star Farmer Award. He is picked on leadership ability, his supervised farming program, and his farm and home program in the shop. The most important of these being his supervised farming program.

Myron is a senior at Appomattox High School, and is president of the Robert E. Lee FFA Chapter. As a member in the FFA, Myron carried one acre of corn, one brood sow and one dairy calf. Now in his senior year, he is carrying: five acres of barley, one brood sow, two heifers, pasture, and five acres of corn. He also maintains a farm orchard of apples, peaches and prunes fruit trees and grapevines as supplementary farm jobs. Future Farmers work, Myron has served 3 years on the executive committee, one year as assistant secretary, one year as secretary, and is now serving as Chapter president. He has been on the Degree Team for three years, the Dairy Judging Team for two years, and the Crop Judging Team and Shop Judging Team for two years. He has served on numerous FFA committees, including chairman of the Supervised Farming Committee for two years.

In other high school activities, Myron has served as president of the sophomore class, treasurer of the junior class, and is currently president of the senior class. He has been a member of the Beta Club for two years, and was vice-president of the S. C. A. in his junior year.

Pyron is now president of the Student Cooperative Association.
